Profile

Learning experience designer and training lead with a 12-year foundation in people-facing operations. I design and build learning for diverse, global audiences: diagnosing what learners actually struggle with, choosing the right format for each need (live sessions, eLearning, games, performance support or tools built into the workflow), then prototyping, testing and improving it with learner feedback and data. I build my own learning tools, including an AI-assisted eLearning tracking portal and a scenario-based learning game, and I care about learning that is accessible, inclusive and easy to follow for second-language speakers. Outside work I share free knowledge as a history podcaster and economics blogger.

Selected learning projects

Reply Runner, a learning game

Scenario-based game on tone and empathy, built in HTML and JavaScript. Explanatory feedback, retrieval practice, skill-level debrief and a relaxed-pace mode for slower readers and second-language speakers.

eLearning completion portal

Replaced a web of spreadsheets and message threads with one role-based portal for about 460 learners: live completion data, automated follow-ups, weekly reporting and data health checks.

Team Lead, Training & Orientation

ModSquad · remote, 500+ person customer support project

- Design and deliver instructor-led, virtual and blended learning for T1/T2, T3, social support and internal teams; 400+ learners from several countries onboarded across 20+ cohorts, with 4-week time to proficiency and attrition under 10%.
- Diagnose capability gaps from KPIs, QA reviews and case audits, then choose the right intervention: targeted training, coaching or process fixes, with SMART goals to follow up.
- Develop curricula, learning materials and hands-on activities around specific learning goals, including eLearning content in Articulate 360; designed two training modules and several gamification tools.
- Built the project's eLearning tracking portal (Google Apps Script, AI-assisted development) on top of Skilljar data, with role-based views for learners, managers and reporting teams, and a sandbox copy for testing before changes go live.
- Partner with managers, departments and subject-matter experts to align learning with business needs; coach SMEs to guide learners with questions and visual aids rather than answers.
- Evaluate effectiveness through completion data, QA results and performance trends, and report impact to senior stakeholders across locations and time zones.

Curator (subject-matter expert)

ModSquad

- Led classes on specific topics and workflows, designed hands-on case practice and coached learners through live cases; wrote assessments of strengths, gaps and next steps for their managers. Named Mod of the Month, September 2025.

Feb – Jul 2025

Support Agent, T1/T2

ModSquad

- Top-performing bilingual agent on complex, high-volume cases; every ModSquad team lead and manager starts on the support floor.

Jul 2017 – Jul 2024

Airbnb Community Support, T1/T2

Movate (formerly Directly)

- Seven years explaining product updates and policy changes to Airbnb hosts and guests worldwide, in Italian and English, against NPS, CSAT and resolution targets; channelled recurring learner and user needs back to the client.

Aug 2017 – Jul 2020

WordPress.com Certified Expert

Automattic

- Helped users of WordPress.com, built on the open-source WordPress project, configure and fix their sites, translating technical concepts into clear guidance for non-technical audiences and editing HTML and CSS directly.
